Mrs. Giacomo believes the textile arts program will become increasingly popular because it offers opportunities for learning in "assemblage" and "mixtures" which appeal to artists who are trying to express a concept. In the opinion of her classmates, she said it all when she defined an artist as "a person with an idea."

Bill to 'abolish' Levee Board wouldn't accomplish that and would inject levee control issue into balloting in all Board Districts of 2 counties

There has been a lot of talk in recent years about "abolishing" the East Side Levee and Sanitary District. The idea sounds good because who likes to pay property because who likes to pay property taxes?

Particularly do people dislike financially supporting an agency that for most of seven decades has hired, purchased and awarded contracts in a manner bad for taxpayers but good for politics, specifically East St. Louis city hall politics.

For this reason, Quad-Cityans might be expected to jump on the bandwagon to support a bill prepared for introduction at Springfield by State Rep. Monroe L. Flinn, Granite City Steel Co. yardmaster and a legislator from the 57th District, immediately south of here. But they do not appear to be enchanted by it; it does not really abolish the levee system but merely replaces it with another district.

Mr. Flinn asked us for any comments we might have after would be ideal if the link with politics could be reduced in a successor district.

Instead, the new taxing body would have trustees picked by county board chairmen, who in turn are chosen by county board members. This would spread the political ramifications of levee patronage and purchasing control to every county board district in both Madison and St. Clair Counties, rather than to the actual levee system boundaries (Quad-Cities and East St. Louis-Canteen-Centreville-Stites).

Another central weakness of Another central weakness of the existing East Side Levee and Sanitary District is its limited responsiveness to citizens' wishes. The boundaries group together two distinct, non-contiguous, highly dif-ferent communities, neither one of which has much dialogue with the other.

Quad-Cityans, who by far pay the most taxes and whose assessment is nearly as large of that of the southern portion of the Levee District, elect two trustees—a minority of the five-member levee

The three East St. Louis area residents can and usually do control levee decisions; they do not run in the Quad-Cities, and they act accordingly toward this community. The bill for a replacement district fails to alter the 2-5 makeup; Quad-Cityans still would have no voice in the filling of a majority of the levee trustee positions.

3. The legislation injects none of the safeguards suggested for years as steps that might give taxpayers a fairer break.

The General Assembly has at its disposal numerous proposals along this line; we recall voicing a few ourselves at an official hearing conducted in East St. Louis during the 1960s by an Illinois Senate-House panel headed by Sen. John Graham. Industry, labor and taxpayer spokesmen also were heard.

4. If direct election of levee trustees is to be ended, many people feel the best selection method would be appointment by the governor. No provision for such an alternative is included in the bill.

The changes would be accomplished through a public referendum later this year. This seems like a lot of expense and trouble for a plan that ostensibly offers something new and good but in reality could lead to a wave of even deeper disappointment than is now felt toward the high-cost, low-service, debt-ridden agency.

Locate refrigerator away from heat sources.

If possible, locate your refrigerator away from direct sunlight, heating ducts and heat-producing appliances.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY IN OPERATING YOUR REFRIGERATOR

Follow these tips from appliance experts

Open your refrigerator only when necessary. Try to limit the number of times the door is opened—and the length of time it stays open.

Defrost at the proper time

Check the door

If you defrost manually, do it before the ice deposit is ½" thick. A build-up of ice cuts the cooling power of the coils.

Close a dollar bill in the door.
If it pulls out easily, the gasket may need replacing.

Choose the right temperature for food storage. Temperature settings should be at zero in the freezer section, and 34 to 38 degrees in the refrigerator.

Store food properly.
Spread food out on the shelves for even air circulation and longer food life. For the freezer section, wrap foods air tight, label and date all packages.

Clean coils regularly.
Frequent cleaning to remove dust and lint from coils keeps your refrigerator running efficiently and economically.

Providing energy is our business.
Using it wisely is everybody's business.
